

Providing Healthy Alternatives

We have looked at different activities for teens to do as an alternative to spending most of their time on-line. This document looks at combining why they engage in on-line play with alternative activities to stimulate the same senses and rewards. We know it is good to establish a health balance between on-line and off-line activities but it can hard to identify the right activity for your child.

Ask your child why they engage in on-line gaming. What do they get from it?
Why do they enjoy it?

The main reasons tend to be the following:

Stress release

For fun

A way to relax

Social

Boredom

Escapism

Once you know your child's reasons you can link their reason to an alternative off-line activity.

Reasons for Gaming

Alternative inside activities

Alternative outside activities

For fun

Board games, baking getting creative

Playing Sports, watching live sports attending an event, going with friends to a theme park/activity centre, visiting a relative volunteering

A way to relax

Reading a book, listening to music, cooking, having a bath, getting creative, drawing/colouring, meditation

Running, cycling, gardening climbing

Social

Board games
Card games

Meet up with friends
Join a sports team or local club
Volunteer

Boredom

Learning a new skill, taking a course, playing board games, getting creative, making something

Joining a club, taking lessons in something, making up challenges to do, taking up a form of exercise.
volunteering in the community

Form of escapism

Art, listening to music, doing something creative, reading, playing an instrument

Taking part in a sporting activity, running, cycling, hiking, climbing gardening, doing yoga

Creative

Drawing cartoons or pictures, constructing something, designing and/or making something, writing, learning a new skill, playing chess, cooking

Learning a new skill – taking a class, doing outside art

Substituting online play for offline alternatives.

Often the games young people play can easily be played offline too.

- If your child enjoys FIFA, introduce them to Subbuteo or table football
- If they enjoy solitaire, introduce them to card games
- If they enjoy challenges, take them to an adventure park or indoor obstacle course
- If they like character games get them to create their own character or make a super cape and react their own version
- If they like shooting games, set up a shooting range using nerf guns outside or take them paintballing
- If they enjoy sports style games, get them involved in clubs, a local sports team. Teach them golf or pool.

In-app purchases.

Rather than buy a virtual character or item, get them earning their rewards.
Complete a task for money and they can save up for a new game or reward.
This makes the effort of tasks worthwhile AND teaches them the value of money.

